

Gathering signatures at Rio Tinto Stadium

The stadium is close to the TRAX blue line (get off at Sandy Expo Center and walk west to State St and then north to the stadium). Drivers can park at other TRAX stations and then hop on the train, or pay for parking near the stadium, or park at Sandy City Hall and take the shuttle that starts 2 hours before RSL games (not sure about Royals games). Get there early and there may be street parking on 9400 S, just south of the stadium. (See blue-and-white P.)

Before the crowds arrive for RSL games you can try collecting signatures from folks tailgating in the Auric Solar parking lot (spot A). Note that you can access this parking lot from the stadium via a walkway (spot B). This lot is pretty dead at Royals games.

After the crowds arrive the best place to stand is perhaps at entrance gate E1 (there's a big Real Salt Lake sign), the second best place to stand is at E2, and the third best place to stand is at E3. Spot E1 is on public property (State St) and we've gathered at Spot E2 without any problems, only an occasional request to stand on one side or the other of the entrance. We haven't gathered at Spot E3 but it's worth a try!

Another great place to stand (especially when it's close to or past game time) is across the street, at stop light SL1, because you can get people while they're waiting for the light: "You missed the light, but you can still sign for clean air!" Offer to walk across the street with them if the light changes while they're signing. If there are lots of folks gathering, try stop lights SL2 or SL3 (which is on the way from the TRAX station).
